

Our History, and Why.

WakeUp Carolina is a community-based movement born out of one family's heartbreakingly loss of their son, Creighton, in the summer of 2016. Creighton's family made a promise and a commitment to share their story and affect change. The community rose to the need and partnered to ensure "that no one and no family walks this walk alone."

Nanci Shipman's openness ignited a cause and shed a bright light on the larger crisis of Opioid misuse locally and nationally. In honor of Creighton and in keeping with the promise made to provide hope in recovery, Creighton's House was born. Creighton's siblings, Wheaton, Jack and Hollice, sparked the idea for a safe place to be a bedrock for those in recovery. A place that would meet young adults, youth and their families "where they are" on their journey. A place with peer support specialists, tools and resources, and other young like-minded people on the path to recovery could be found. WakeUp Carolina is proud to bring their vision to fruition.

Today Nanci Shipman, WakeUp Carolina's founder, is joined by a groundswell of support from others impacted by opioid misuse to create and sustain Creighton's House.

Hope for Our Community

AWARENESS • EDUCATION • RECOVERY

The House That Hope Built.

More than bricks and mortar, WakeUp Carolina gives wings to founder Nanci Shipman's belief that there should be a safe place for our community to come together and provide hope, raise awareness and facilitate recovery for Charleston's youth, young adults and their families. Whether through meetings, coaching or pathway focus, the team at Creighton's House is with you every step of the way in your recovery.

Community partners throughout the area have united to address rising substance misuse among our youth head-on. We invite you to be a part of this awakening with a donation on WakeUpCarolina.org.

Creating Hope and Change by Fighting Substance Misuse in Charleston, Berkeley & Dorchester Counties.

Our Mission:

AWARENESS

We are starting the conversation among our youth and the influencers they count on.

EDUCATION

Everyone has a story to tell. Our many education programs help empower the community with tools to affect change.

RECOVERY

Creighton's House is WakeUp Carolina's vision for a community center that provides a safe space to offer peer-support services, meetings and training to people seeking and maintaining recovery.
